FRIENDS MEET DR. CRANE AT WEST BETHEL ANNIVERSARY

Over 140 people attended the services which were held at the West Bethel Union Church Sunday. The services were conducted by Dr. Henry H. Crane of Detroit, Mich., who was the pastor of the Church 25 years ago at the time of its organization. The subject of the sermon was "Growth." Mrs. Laurence Lord and Miss Hazel Grover sang "My Lord and I" and Laurence Lord played a trumpet solo. The benediction was given by Dr. Hickok of Scranton, Penna., who was superintendent of the Scranton District of the Methodist Church when Dr. Crane was in Scranton. Dr. Crane's family and Mrs. Hickok and sons were also present. The speakers were introduced by Rev. Orrin Manifold, pastor of the Church.

After the services Dr. Crane greeted the members of the congregation personally, many of whom were attendants during his pastorate here. This was followed by a picnic at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Grover.

BETHEL ROAD WORK

The work of Bethel's road crew under Commissioner Bert Brown has made good progress this season. While a fixed program of extending tarred roads is not yet made, the mileage of improved road grows steadily and it is possible to forecast the stretches of highway which next year will have a tar surface.

This summer the State Aid road has been completed to the Greenwood town line on the East Bethel-Locke Mills road. This year's project, 4050 feet, is ready for tar which will be applied next spring. The rebuilt section of this road which was done last year from Bean's Corner to the Edgar Coolidge place, has been tarred. This leaves less than a mile in the vicinity to be put in condition for tar.

Third class road is now under construction adjoining last year's work near the L. U. Bartlett place below Middle Intervale. It is expected that this year will bring the good road to a point near the home of Ernest Buck, which will leave only a short run for next year. It is now the practice to use part of the maintenance money for tar, and with the completion of the program of several years here next year it seems likely that the whole way from Bethel through Middle Intervale to East Bethel and on to Locke Mills soon will have a year-round surface.

By a Special Resolve of Legislature about half a mile of road has been built on Sunday from Swan's Corner toward the Newry town line. Money will be available next year to complete this project.

Another piece of improved road is the stretch on the Flat road from West Bethel to the Floyd Kimball place. This was tarred last spring.

The village streets are being tarred this week.

Miss Mary Ann Levesque is ill at the home of Mrs. Ted Gallant.

COUGAR SEEN AT SUNDAY RIVER

A car from Bethel driving to Sunday River Sunday was greeted by a strange spectacle, a half-grown Maine panther crossing the road. The creature was confused by the car and paused long enough for a very good view and positive identification. This species is sometimes known as a cougar and late years has been rather rare in Maine.

HANSCOMS SURPRISED ON FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY

On the evening of Aug. 22, 20 relatives and neighbors drove to Mechanic Falls and surprised Dr. and Mrs. F. E. Hanscom, the occasion being their fortieth wedding anniversary.

The affair was cleverly managed and the arrival of the half dozen cars a complete surprise.

Tables for supper were laid in the dining room and on the connecting porch. Masses of gladioli and other garden flowers decorated the rooms. Mrs. Hanscom cut and served a decorated wedding cake. An original poem dealing with styles and customs of the gay nineties and briefly covering the progress of years was read. On behalf of a neighborhood group H. M. Farwell presented Mr. and Mrs. Hanscom with an electric clock.

After a tour of the gardens the guests inspected Mr. Hanscom's collection of antique furniture and dishes and visited his work shop where he restores and repairs valuable early American furniture. Cards were enjoyed until a late hour.

Those making the party were: Rev. and Mrs. H. T. Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Thurston, Mr. and Mrs. David French, Dr. and Mrs. R. R. Tibbets, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Farwell, Mrs. Emma Van Den Kerkhoven, Miss Margaret Hanscom, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hanscom, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hanscom, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Bailey, Miss Helen Connolly, Miss Dorothy Hanscom and Dr. and Mrs. F. E. Hanscom.

MYRON BRYANT BRINGS HOME 100 POUND TUNA

After a battle of five hours and 10 minutes he subdued a 400 pound tuna at the Richmond Island fishing grounds, which was the fifth of that size or greater taken there within three days.

The giant fish was on display in Bryant's Market Friday and was the talk of the town, and later a great local demand for this popular sea food was discovered.

INNOVATIONS TO BE AT COUNTY FAIR

Baseball Games—Vanderville and Fireworks—Race Booth Changed—Date Sept. 12-16

From all indications the 97th annual Oxford County Fair at Norway and South Paris bids fair to be the outstanding event of the nearly century old series staged by the Oxford County Agricultural Society.

Starting on the first day, Tuesday, Sept. 12, and continuing until midnight of Saturday, Sept. 16, the officers of the society have arranged a program that is replete with variety. Among these attractions will be several baseball games, with such teams as West Paris, Woodstock, Rumford and Norway-South Paris in competition. Rivalry is keen between these local ball tossers and with substantial cash prizes as the reward for the winners, every member will be on their toes to receive a slice of the major prize. Each one of these teams have a large following so that the baselines will be jammed with frenzied rooters, all lending color to the "Oxford County World Series."

Beginning Wednesday forenoon and continuing throughout the week, afternoon and evening, a very fine vaudeville program will be presented on the large open air stage, across the race track, in front of the grand stand. The last three nights of the fair, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the performances will be climaxed by a gigantic display of fireworks. The Rockland Fireworks Company of Boston, in charge of the display, have created a thrilling spectacle, "The Martian Invasion," for the grand finale each evening.

It is guaranteed to be a hair raiser and was created especially for the year 1939, because of the nearness of the planet Mars to the earth. Many will recall the excitement recently over coast to coast broadcast of the invasion of the United States by the inhabitants of Mars. It was because of the future of this radio play that the Rockland Fireworks Company conceived the "Martian Invasion."

The five days of horse racing, with parimutuel betting, will bring to the Oxford County Fair racetrack all of the outstanding horses that have been appearing at the earlier fairs and racemeetings. Patrons at the fair this year will be pleased with the greatly enlarged parimutuel booth located near the grandstand. The new location of this booth will do away with much of the crowding that is the bugaboo of Maine fairs' parimutuel booths. The officials of Oxford County Fair have made extensive surveys and believe that they have remedied the conditions. The addition of a large counting room on the booth will facilitate the handling of bets.

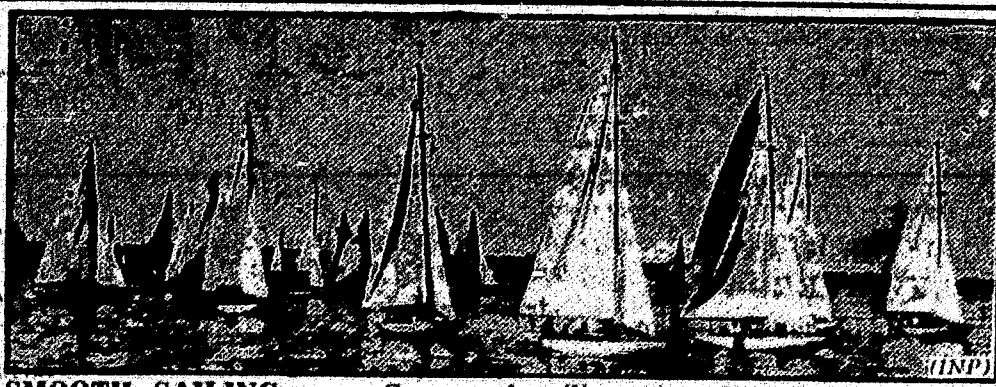

Oxford County Agricultural Society was formed, primarily, for the exhibition of cattle, ox and horse pulling, and the promotion of agriculture in all its branches. Down through the years the officials have kept this fact always in mind, and have continued to make this the most important attraction of the fair. It is this reason that brings the best exhibitors of livestock to Oxford County Fair, year after year, to make it the major "Cattle Show" of Maine.

The drawing events are scheduled for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, with all of the sweepstakes events on the last named day. To make the horse drawing sweepstakes more attractive and create more enthusiasm, an additional prize of $20 has been added.

JOHN NANCE GARNER

Vice-President of the United States, and leading in the poll of Democratic candidates to succeed Roosevelt.

Garner Man of the People, Sound, Rugged and Honest

The time has definitely arrived in America when positions of trust and responsibility should be placed exclusively in the hands of the elders, declared Roy Miller, oldtime editor of Texas, in speaking recently at a gathering of old friends and neighbors of John Nance Garner, vice president, in the little village of Detroit, Texas, where the distinguished Texan was born nearly sixty-nine years ago.

"There is no substitute, either in public or private life, for experience, and experience, of course, comes only with years. As a matter of fact, the only thing that is old about John Nance Garner is some of his political philosophy. He still believes in the old-fashioned virtues of economy, thrift, and self-reliance. In other words, he believes in the old-fashioned, fundamental principles of democracy, and to man in America, in both his public and private life, exemplifies those principles to such a degree as does this great man."

"While achieving high place politically, he has made substantial success of his private life, and it is his proud boast that he owes no human being a thin dime. He believes in the pay-as-you-go system, and what a blessing it would be if that system could be applied to America today."

"Let me be misunderstood, let me say here, with all of the emphasis I can command, that John Garner is no reactionary in his political philosophy. Indeed, he is not even a conservative, if the term be applied with the meaning with which it was clothed in years gone by."

"John Garner is a liberal and a great liberal. He was a liberal Democrat practicing liberalism many years before some of the most vocal present-day sponsors of liberalism were even born. But there is no tinge or taint of radicalism in the liberalism of John Garner. His liberalism is that which would guarantee to every American citizen the right and opportunity to work out his or her salvation with the least possible interference upon the part of the Government. Therefore, he believes in all necessary legislation and regulation to protect the weak against the strong, the poor against the rich, the owner of property against those who would destroy the ownership of property; in short, equality of opportunity for every American citizen. He believes in Democracy and prefers to be known as a Democrat in the old-fashioned interpretation of the term without qualification, prefix, or suffix.

"In such an atmosphere as this, I think we find the real soul and personality of America. From such humble surroundings as these, typified by the lowly log cabins where John Garner and his sainted mother were born have come the truly great in America's glorious history. They knew, as he knows, what America is, what America stands for, and how and why our American system of government was conceived. They knew, as he knows, what it means to toil and strive and work. They knew, as he knows, that there is no substitute for self-reliance and individual initiative, and that any system of government which takes from the individual these fundamental tenets of liberty cannot long endure as a democracy of freemen. They knew, as he knows, that for men to be free they must be guaranteed only freedom of opportunity to work out their own destinies, and that the highest purpose and duty of government in a democracy is to assure to every citizen an equal chance with his neighbor. This is the essence of John Garner's political philosophy."

"I have no patience with those who would seek to analyze the percentage of one's Americanism. It is not a divisible thing. It is not something that can be broken up into parts and appraised in its constituent elements. Either one is an American or he is not. Nevertheless, I cannot help but feel that there never was a time in the history of our beloved country when the need for the leadership of those whose Americanism is beyond all peradventure of doubt was so essentially and vitally necessary to the preservation of America and American institutions as it is at the present moment."

"Here in Red River County, where John Garner's widowed grandmother with her six fatherless children came from Tennessee almost a hundred years ago, built yonder log cabin, and joined the ranks of valiant pioneers who blazed a trail for civilization and laid deep and broad the firm foundations of Imperial Texas, may we find, indeed, the soil from which true Americanism is generated and born. Here in this community, plain, homelike, typically American, is the birthplace of a great American who, in my humble opinion, has been marked by the hand of destiny to become the President of the greatest, richest, and most powerful nation of all time, the United States of America."

40 YEARS AGO in the NEWS

Aug. 23, 1899

No efforts are being spared to make the Bethel Fair of 1899 one of the best in the history of the society.

Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Twaddle rode to the summit of Mt. Washington last Thursday night, arriving at the top in time to enjoy the glorious sunrise. The trip was made with one of the Doctor's horses attached to his phaeton. This is something that few people, to say the least, ever did.

"THEY TELL ME"

Folks used to say that history repeats itself, but it seems that it has speeded up like everything else nowadays and it is repeating pretty often over across. Countries that still make a try at doing business the old fashioned way got a surprise the first of the week when they found that Germany and Russia had got together and agreed on a scrap of paper. With this pact signed it looks as if things will come to a head pretty soon now.
The U. S. should have learned its lesson 20 years ago, and since, and know enough to keep out of any rough stuff they may stir up.
And we have been outsmarted by those fellows over there time and again. In fact our friends over there have taken pretty good care to see that we should be squeezed dry.
You would think if the lesson was learned in good shape, and we paid a good big price for it, that it wouldn't have to be reviewed again, ever. Once is enough.

INFORMAL PORTRAITS

Use a portrait attachment to take informal portrait close-ups such as this with a box camera or fixed-focus folding model.

SUMMER is an ideal season for informal outdoor portraits of your family and friends, and informal portraits are about as easy to take as any other type of snapshot. Naturally, such informal shots are not to be compared with the work of skilled, experienced professional photographers... but, since you take them yourself for your own album, they do have unique personal interest.

Your informal portraits may show one, two, or several persons, grouped naturally—without stiffness. The subjects should fill most of the picture space; too much background is detrimental. Faces should be turned so that a good likeness is obtained—whether profile, full-face, or in between—but as a rule the subjects should not look directly at the camera.

Two types of lighting are acceptable. Direct sunlight from one side is all right, but straight-overhead lighting from the noon sun produces harsh, displeasing shadows. For a softer lighting, and better likenesses, place the subjects in "open shade"—for example, at the edge of shade from a big tree, where they will receive light reflected from the sky, but no direct sun.

Informal portraits in direct sunlight require no increase in ex-posure. In open shade (not under trees or a porch) try an exposure of 1/25 second at f.8 lens opening. With a box camera or inexpensive folding type, use the smallest lens opening, and give a very short, time exposure —about as fast as you can work the shutter—with the camera on a firm, solid support.

A focusing camera enables you to take reasonable close-ups without a lens attachment, as well as full-figure shots. You can also take full-figure shots and group shots with a box camera if it has a "two-point" focus setting, enabling you to get as near as five or six feet to the subject.
But for real close-ups with the inexpensive camera, you will need a portrait attachment—a small supplementary lens that slips on over the regular camera lens. The attachment does not change the exposure.

Often, an informal portrait gains interest if the subject is busy with some everyday activity—for example, filling a tobacco pipe, if a man, or crocheting, if a woman. The action adds story quality—and tells more about the subject. Concerted action—such as conversation—adds unity to a group picture.

Make a collection of good, informal portraits of your friends and family. They'll justify a special section in your snapshot album.

BOYS WIN CALIFORNIA TRIP

Dwight Sawin Jr., South Waterford, and Wyman Dresser, Harrison, members of the Western Maine Dairy Club, were winners of the state dairy demonstration contest at Orono Friday, Aug. 18. Dwight and Wyman showed how to test milk by the Babcock method. They will receive a free trip to San Francisco, Calif., in October. These boys are members of a sectional dairy club (the only one of its kind in the state). This dairy club is led by Maurice Flint of Norway.
Wyman has a Jersey calf and Dwight a brown Swiss.

Wyman Dresser of Harrison completes his seventh year of club work this fall with 21 projects to his credit. He has acted as assistant leader two years, president three years and color bearer.
Among his projects completed are:
garden, chicken raising, poultry management, room improvement, baby beef, dairy, potatoes and beans. Wyman enters the senior class at Norway High this fall.

Dwight Sawin Jr., of South Waterford, president of the Western Maine Dairy Club, is enrolled for his first year in 4-H work. He will be a senior at Norway High School this fall. Dwight has been active in school functions.

Dwight and Wyman credit their success in this demonstration to the help received from Maurice Flint, their club leader, R. F.
Blanchard, county agent, and Edward Brown, agricultural instructor at Norway.

famous Three Quarter Century

portation and has appointed County Chairmen, and they in turn have secured local chairmen. This is the 15th year that Mr. Holley has taken charge of this phase of the arrangements, and much credit is due him for the able way in which the transportation problems are met. If possible Mr. Holley will be present to say a few words to the members.

All members and friends who plan to attend the Dover-Foxcroft session are requested to bring a picnic lunch. Coffee, with cream

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

KEEP YOUR SALT CELLARS CLEAN

THE other day I read of an eccentric old woman, rich and socially prominent, who went from house to house judging the occupants by the condition of the salt cellars on their tables.

If these were clean and well kept she put her stamp of approval on the household, but if they were not, regardless of the graciousness and charm of her hostess, she put them down as dowdy folks.

Not all of us, fortunately, are quite so critical, but in one sense we are. And it is good that we are. We are critical of the merchandise we buy and of the merchants from whom we buy it. It is our criticism which keeps the standards of goods and stores high.

One of the many advantages of advertising is that it invites us to be critical of the goods being advertised.

The advertiser assures us that his goods are good. He invites us to compare them with others. We do. If he relaxes for a minute and lets his standards drop, we discern it. We tell others. We cease buying his product.

He knows that even the finest of commercial reputations will suffer if a mere handful of people get wind of the fact that the goods are sub-standard. They will tell their friends. Soon a whispering campaign is under way. He suffers.

It is only by being careful at every minute of the day that his goods and service are up to high standard that the man who advertises can succeed.

You expect more of him than you do of the man who does not advertise. The non-advertising manufacturer or merchant can fall down in delivering quality and service. You may expect him to. But the man who advertises has to live up to his high obligation.

So you see that advertising is a great vigilance committee, established and maintained in your interest, to see that the men who aspire to sell you will always be worthy of your trade.

The merchant who advertises must treat you better than the merchant who does not. He must treat you as though you were the most influential person in town.

As a matter of cold fact you are. You hold the destiny of his business in your hands. He knows it. He shows it. And you benefit by good service, by courteous treatment, by good value—and by lower prices.

Be critical of advertised goods and stores which advertise. They want you to be critical. Advertising invites you to compare before you buy. It stands or falls on value alone.

'White Sands' Not Sand;

Large Dunes Are Gypsum

The "white sands" that give their name to White Sands National monument, New Mexico, are not sands at all, according to strict scientific definition, says the interior department.

Most sand is composed of very fine particles of quartz and other hard rock, worn round and smooth by the action of wind and water. New Mexico's white dunes are made up of small fragments of gypsum, blown by the wind. Geologists believe this gypsum is formed partly in alkal lakes, and partly from water which "sweats up" from the ground among the dunes. The gypsum comes to the surface in solution.

When the water evaporates the gypsum is left as snow-white crystals. Wind piles them up in rippled dunes, sometimes 100 feet in height. The entire body of sand dunes along a 30-mile front is moving at the rate of approximately eight inches a year toward the town of Alamogordo, some 18 miles away.

Boys Ride Tortoises
Turtle riding is one of the favorite games down at Nassau in the Bahamas. The native boys at Nassau love to play jockey to 700-pound sea turtles. Their method is to dive for a big salt water tortoise lying quietly on the bottom in the transparent water and grab the forward end of his shell just back of his neck. It's a dangerous way to mount the animal, because if he draws in his neck and elects to stay down, the rider's hands may be caught between the turtle's neck and his shell, and the rider has to stay down with him. However, the boys know just how to do it. The turtle comes to the surface, and the ride begins. The only trouble is that there isn't any way of guiding this steed; the boy has to go where his mount happens to feel like swimming.

Dickens' Chosen Home
Gad's Hill in England, forever associated as the last home of Charles Dickens, was the place Dickens had picked out to dwell in when he had arrived at the fulness of fame and prosperity. When yet a boy, he would often pass the house with his father, and frequently say to him: "If ever I have a dwelling of my own, Gad's Hill Place is the house I mean to buy."

Numerous Explanations

Of Origin of 'Hoosier'

Some 14 explanations of the origin of the term "Hoosier" have been offered. Meredith Nicholson, in "The Hoosier," discussed most of them. The earliest record of the use of the word is thought to be John Finley's poem, "The Hoosier's Nest," printed in the Indianapolis Journal, January 1, 1830. It was argued that the word must have been well known at that time or Finley would not have used it with no trace of doubt that it would be understood.

Such authorities as Governor Wright and the Indiana historian, O. H. Smith, were convinced that Hoosier is a corruption of the pioneer greeting, "Who's here?" Sulgrove, another writer of Indiana history, alluded to the word as a development from "husher," a term given in pioneer times to a good fighter who was able to hush his adversaries, and applied to the "greenies from the New Purchase" who went down the Ohio river to work, and fought laborers from Kentucky. There seems also to be some support for the explanation that it is a mispronunciation of "hussar," popularized by a Polish colonel who lectured through the state in the early days, notes a writer in the Indianapolis News. It presumes that young Indiana men were captivated by the hussars as pictured by the lecturer, and took the name and pronunciation upon themselves. Hoosier was a family name heard along the river, and another explanation is that the fondness of Indiana people for cookies made by a Louisville baker named Hoosier gained them the distinction of being called "Hoosier's customers," and finally, Hoosiers.

In the Carolinas, Virginia, Kentucky and Missouri, a rough country man is called a hoosier without reference to Indiana, and it is thought by some that the name can be traced to a time earlier than the opening of the Northwest Territory.

The Marathon Races

On the plains of Marathon, about 20 miles northeast of Athens, in ancient Greece, Miltiades, the Athenian general, defeated the Persians in 490 B. C. The Persian forces were led by Darius, a gallant commander. For a time the Athenians were hard pressed and greatly needed reinforcements to drive out the invading army. Pheidippides, a courier or runner, was dispatched to Sparta to solicit aid against the enemy. He accomplished a notable "cross-country run," arriving in Sparta on the second day after leaving Athens.
